FEATURES

A once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to own a living work of art — a home that transcends architecture and becomes an experience. Designed in 1948 by Frank Lloyd Wright, the Weisblat House is one of only four FLW-designed Usonian homes within The Acres, a 70-acre wooded enclave on the National Register of Historic Places. Just a few hours from Chicago and Detroit — and an easy drive from Grand Rapids airport — this retreat offers architectural pedigree, modern comfort, and a profound connection to nature. Constructed of concrete block and Honduran mahogany, the home’s low horizontal form settles naturally into the landscape. Signature ribbon windows, cantilevered rooflines, and walls of glass blur the line between indoors and out, flooding the space with soft, filtered light from surrounding old-growth trees. The home offers three bedrooms and 2.5 baths, with two bedrooms currently combined into an elongated flex space — easily returned to its original layout. Each room reflects Wright’s human-scaled proportions and intentional flow.

The rear family room overlooks a tranquil frog pond and Michigan woodland. A screened-in porch and dedicated laundry room extend daily comfort into nature. Mrs. Weisblat’s beloved greenhouse remains a year-round sanctuary.

Sited on a private acre with an additional adjacent acre, the Weisblat House offers rare seclusion in a historically significant setting.
